ANSWER: There is a commonly held misconception that a day in prison is counted as two days. A day in prison (during a prison sentence) is the same length as a day out of prison. However, in Prison, there is a process known as REMISSION. Which simply means the reduction of the prison sentence by a certain length of time. Remission is calculated in such a way that for any sentence beyond 1 month, for every 20 days served,10 are waived off.

Hi, I'm new to this. So I wrote to my first two pen pals a couple weeks ago. They both are in prison for robbery, if that matters. #2 pen pal took the longest to respond but his letter was nice and very simple with only a few questions. So naturally I responded to him right away and put off the letters from pen pal #1 to worry about later. #1 pen pal responded right away which
